BIAS

. . . . . Beware of bias when the merits of compressed air, universal electric or high frequency electric tools are under discussion. CP manufactures all three types . . . and their skilled engineers are therefore in the unique position to make a recommendation for any particular system entirely without prejudice or bias. It is of no consequence to them which system you choose. CP are purely concerned that you should install the tools best suited to your individual production needs knowing that either type, within its class, is unsurpassed for reliability and efficiency in operation.

S. SMITH & SONS (England) LTD.

The strength of the house of Smiths is due in no small measure to the principles upon which its foundations have been laid.

These principles have sprung from the belief that no problem connected with the Smiths' sphere of activity is too difficult to be undertaken. Enterprises hitherto considered almost impossible of successful achievement in this country have been tackled with foresight and confidence, born of a specialised knowledge of its eventual necessity.

The successful establishing of the British Clockmaking Industry is a typical example of this foresight.

Although, in the days of peace, the value of the pioneer is not always recognised, the results of his labour, during years of war, have proved immeasurable.

The Smiths' group of Companies is proud to take its place beside other organisations, whose industry and determination have brought us ultimate victory.

FOREWORD

THE ELEVENTH EDITION OF THE INTERNATIONAL WHO'S WHO is the first since the fourth edition in 1939 to be produced in a full year of peace. The difficulties which beset the publication of an international reference work in war-time have to a great extent been overcome during 1946. Despite the considerable movements of population which have taken place during the last seven years we have been able to re-establish contact with many individuals from whom we were cut off while the war lasted. Only in the case of the two principal enemy countries has it proved impossible to obtain adequate information about some of their nationals whose names appear in The International Who's Who.

The present edition is therefore the most up-to-date that has appeared since the first year of the war. More biographical notices have been revised during the past year than in any of the war years. Death has necessitated the deletion of several hundred names, including some whom the world could ill afford to lose, and others, like the defendants at Nuremberg, who were responsible for so many of our present troubles. Their places have been taken by others who have acquired a high reputation in various spheres of human activity either during or since the war.

The response to past editions of this work encourages us to believe that it does meet the ever-growing need for concise, accurate and up-to-date information about the world's most eminent living personalities. We wish to express our thanks to all those who, by completing questionnaires or by correcting proofs sent to them, have enabled us to bring our information up to date. While every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of the material appearing in The International Who's Who, criticisms and suggestions for its improvement will be greatly appreciated.
